Proclamation of the Governor.

The President's call for 300,000 volunteers, to serve three years or during the war, to fill up the old regiments, makes the allotment to Kentucky of 12,000 to be raised.

This call must be met, either by volunteers, or by draft, at an early day. The 5th of January is set by the President as the time of ordering the draft. This will give time for Congress to repeal the $300 ex-

Volunteers will receive the liberal bounty and increased pay offered by the Govern-ment; the conscript will not. Volunteers select their own company and regiment— the conscript will be assigned without re-gard to his wishes. The volunteer will be honored by his companions in arms and by his country-the conscript will not. Recruiting officers will be detailed from the various regiments and assigned their recruit-ing posts by the Adjutant General. The proportion due from each county, to equalize the service from the commencement of the war, will be made known by the Adjutant General, and notice thereof given. Each county will be required to furnish its allotment either in volunteers or conscripts. Recruiting for the twelve months service will cease with the authorities heretofore given, so soon as the regiments forming are filled.

Let no man say he would volunteer if it were for defense of the State or to serve in the State Facts answer such declarations. For months you have been called on for such service, and failed to respond This service is now closed to you. Kentucky now is, and must continue to be,

Kentucky now is, and must continue to be, exposed so long as there are rebel armies in the field. Guerrilla raids will cease when the rebel armies are broken up. The only securily to your State against invasions and raids, is the destruction of the rebel armies. Were our old regiments full even to the minimum, the days of rebellion would be numbered, and but few. The true defense of your State therefore is by filling the old regiments now in the field. This will give a crushing force, which must soon sweep the rebel armies from the field.

It's better for you, and for the service that you enlist in the old regiments. It secures you from much of the dangers of camp and field, and greatly increases your efficiency.

Faueral of the late Maj. Gen. Buford. The funeral services of the late Major General John Buford took place at the New time given the remains of the lamented dead were conveyed to the church from the residence of Major General Stoneman and placed in front of the pulpit, the coffin drap. ed with the American flag and the insignia of an officer of his rank. Eight front pews on each side of the centre aisle were reserved for the Members of the Cabinet, pall bearers, relatives of the deceased, and officers of his staff; the front pews on each eide being occupied by the Secretary of War and the General in-chief of the Army and staff, respectively. The pall bearers were Major Generals Casey, Augur, Heintzelman, Warren, Hancock, Doubleday, Sickles, and Schofield. The service consisted of a solemn dirge by the choir and organ, reading of Scripture, an eloquent, appropriate, and touching discourse by Rev. Dr. Gurley, pascor, followed by prayer and benediction. earth. The church was filled to its utmost capacity, although but comparatively few of the vast crowd seeking admission could be accommodated. The number of distinguished officers present, in addition to those named, was unusually large, while many, compelled to abandon all effort for admission, remained outside in the piercing cold until the religious exercises were completed. Religious services being concluded, the remains were escorted to the railway station Fifth United States Artillery, with a squadron of the Scott's Nine Hundred, accounpanied by the fine band of the Seventeenth ted under the direction of Major Geu. Stonemains of Gen. Buford, escorted by Capts. Keogh and Wadsworth, have been taken to West Point for interment, where his admiring and devoted brother officers contemplate the erection of a monument to the memory of their deceased gallant and beloved General.

Dr. Gorley's Funeral Sermon.

The following is the brief but eloquent and impressive sermon delivered on Sunday last, at the funeral services of the lamented Gen. John Buford, at the New York avenue Presbyterian Church, by the Rev Dr. P D

Gurley, Pastor of the Church: The uncertainty of life is a trite and familiar theme; so much so that upon funeral and other occasions we scarcely expect to hear any thing said about it which has not already been urged upon us again and again. And yet the real influence of this theme upon our feelings, purposes, and lives is but slight; etrangely limited and inconsiderable does it seem to be, even to ourselves, when we but pause a moment for reflection. Probably there is no one here to day who, as he looks event that has gathered us around it, will not feel in his very heart that the brevity of this mortal life, and the nearness of eternity, which claims from him a more serious, ear uest, and practical regard than he has hitherto given it And, my hearers, Providence designs that such a scene and occasion as this shall be the means of breaking, at least for a moment, the spell that binds us to the earth as our home and to earthly good as our portion, and of leading us to consider and lay to our hearts the truth that the places which now know us will soon know us no more. And how well adapted is this occasion to impress us with this lesson, and to bring it home to us as a near and an urgent personal concern! A gallant officer of our army, who had attracted the gaze and commanded the admiration of the nation by his deeds of skill and bravery; who was perhaps second to no other officer in the particular service to which he was devoted, who was esteemed by all who knew him for his many noble and attractive qualities of mind and heart, and had before him, so far as man could judge, a promising and a brilliant future, has early and unexpectedly fallen-fallen into the cold embrace of death! But how and where did he tall? Not by the missiles of the embattled foe; he had been often where they fell thick and fast, and happily escaped them. Not on the ensanguined field; he had been on many such fields and eeen thousands fall at his side. But "while death's dark elements were battling round" an unseen hand protected and preserved him. He died by disease, separated from the men of his command-died gently and quietly it the house of a friend and tellow-officer in this city. There, in such an bour as he thought not, and in such an hour as those who admired and loved him thought not, the fatal summons came. He heard it, and passed away. Could any thing be more impressive and touching as a comment upon the declaration that "All flesh is as grass and all the glory of man as the flower of grass. The grass withereth, and the flower thereof falleth away." The sun of life extinguished at its meridian; the form lately erect and vigor-ous now prostrate and dead; friends, kindred, fellow-officers, and compatriots in arms lamenting his departure; the deep, silent, and tearful sadness that pervades this entire assembly, the sable hearse awaiting its burden, and the distant opening grave its tenant!

Gen. Butord was connected with an excellent and well-known family in Kentucky His early training and education were care fully and judiciously conducted, and his mental and moral development was gratifying to his friends and bright with the promise of future usefulness and distinction. He graduated at the West Point Military Academy in 1848, standing well in his class and in the estimation of all who knew him. He entered upon the duties of military life with zeal and quiet energy, and discharged the various trusts which, at different times and in different places, were committed to him with marked intelligence and fidelity. He grew steadily and surely into the confi dence and love of all with whom he was officially connected as superiors, inferiors, and equals. He impressed them as a man of sterling principle and worth, and they found it easy to admire, and trust, and love

When the present unhappy civil war broke out, and many around him went over to the cause of the rebellion, he was found true to the country and to the flag under which he had been born and educated and promoted to honor. He knew no other ban at that coffin, and contemplates the sad ner; he desired no other. Promptly and fense of the Government in the day of its darkness and peril Where duty called him there he went, and there he stood, and there he suffered, if necessary, setting those around and under him an example that they should follow in his steps. He merited promotion, and he received it. He rose from one grade of honor and responsibility to another, the admiration of the men he commanded and of the nation he served. He was a modest. yet brave; retiring, yet efficient; quiet, but vigilant; unostentatious, but prompt and persevering; careful of the lives of his men. careful with an almost parental solicitude, yet never shrinking from action, however fraught with peril, when the time and place for such action, had come. His skill and courage were put to stern and decisive tests on many hard-fought fields, and they were ever equal to the emergency; they never faltered or failed him. No wonder that those whom he counselled and led were devoted to him; no wonder they were saddened by his unexpected death; no wonder they gather tearfully around his coffin to day and mourn and weep as they look upon faded features, and see him carried to his rest. The country mingles its tears with theirs, and well it may, for one of its bravest defenders has fallen, one of itschoicest mili tary officers is being carried to his grave. His last sickness was but brief-the fruit, i may be, of protracted joil and exposure He met it calmly, quietly, and without a murmer. He desired to live that he might longer serve the lacerated and bleeding cause of the Republic, but when remedies failed, and it was evident that his end was near, he silently bowed to the behest of Heaven, and consented to die. The Government honored him to the last. On the day of his death, and but a little while before his departure, his commission as a Major General was put into his feeble hands-a distinction well earned and well bestowed of but little service to him, it is true, but gratifying to the nation, and a boon to his He lived long enough to know that family. the Government he had defended appreciated his services; then taking up the freshly written commission, he gently and his heart still throbbing with the warm pulse of patriotism beat on a few brief noments and then grew cold and still.

The triends and defenders of the country even the bravest and best of them, die; but the cause of the country abides, the Guardian God of the country lives, and our confidence is that He will furnish and bring forward others to take the places of the fallen so that our national life and unity shall be preserved, and more than our former strength and glory shall be restored. #### [From the National Intelligencer.] Circumstances Alter Cases,

We published a few days ago an extract purporting to be taken from a recent private letter addressed by Gen. Meade "to a friend in New Jersey." In this extract Gen. Meade wrote like a true soldier, Christian, and pations it awakens may be turned by you triot. ### ilints to Mothers-Discipline.

The system of governing by moral suasion entirely is a very pretty one in theory, but is too often found eadly wanting when the attempt is made to put it strictly in practice. Almost every mother of every day children will find at times a stout little rebel, who will only yield to the doctrine of coercion. It is true, where other means will be as effectual, it is a great deal better to employ them. When a loving tone, and gentle persuasive remonstrauces will restrain a wayward child, by all means use it. Yet, deliberate, willful disobedience, falsehood, profanity, intentional cruelty to animals, promptly met by serious punishment, and a distinct understanding made with the child. same manner.

An Eccentric Infidet.

A correspondent of the Nothwestern Addote was related to him by an itineraut of the Onio Annual Conference: "I was sent," said he, "to Gallipolis Cir cuit, and having fulfilled the labors of the Sabbath on an autumnal evening, was in vited by an infidel to go home with him. I the struggle, in order that the proprietor, accepted, most cheerfully, and was treated with affable courtesy and the respect due to a minister of the gospel of Christ morning, as I took my leave, my infidel friend courteously invited me to call on him whenever it should suit my convenience. This I generally did, as I came to this appointment throughout the year. As the year neared its close, I thought I would call and offer payment to my host, lest he should charge me, and through me ministers generpurified by their sufferings, and singing as ally with neglect in paying just dues. I their song of deliverance, "The Lord hath called for my bill. He brought forth his book, where was charged in mercantile style, for board, horse-keeping, etc., sums amount-

The aggregate of credit surpassed the debt some three or four dollars, which he immediately produced, passed over to me, and we parted in mutual friendship and love."

Josephine's Granddaughters. There's to be a Queen Eugenia as well as an Empress Eugenia. The new King of Greece, George the First, is to wed Eugenia, a daughter of the Duchess of Leuchtenberg. The Duchess's oldest daughter is betrothed to Prince Humbert, heir to the crown of Italy. These young women are great grand-First Napoleon's first venture, and whom he would have done better to stick to, instead of running after a young wife of blood as son, married a Bavarian Princess, who was made by him the mother of two sons and four daughters. The youngest son married love match, which the Czar had the sense and kindness to approve and promote. Hellas. Though of Northern origin, they are to be Queens in Southern Europe. They have however, much Southern blood, for Martinique which is in far more Southern latitude than Italy or Greece.

It is surprising to see how Josephine's descendants do accumulate crowns, while not a Bonaparte reigns, or is likely to reign, anywhere. Napoleon III is unquestionably one of Josephine's grandsons, but you might put all the Bonaparte blood there is in his veins into the eye of a midge without injuring the midge's sight. Another grandson married a Queen Regent of Portugal, and their son became King of Portugal in 1953.
Two of her granddaughters—daughters of Eugene—became, respectively, Empress of A. H. RANSOM, Brazil and Queen of Sweden; and a third married a German Prince. Now two of her great-granddaughters are to marry Kings. There is something romantic in all this, but there is no romancer who would dare to invent such facts as we have mentioned. France, Portugal, Brazil, Russia, Sweden, Greece and Italy have contributed to elevate the descendants of "the Creole," or soon will do so, while Bonaparte's only legitimate child is dead, and the descendants of his brothers and his sisters are as crownless, almost as were the ancestors of these brothers and sisters. Though Josephine was divorced from Napoleon, she was not di-vorced from Fortune but Napoleon himself

Governor Bramlette's Proclamation.

The Governor's proclamation, which we publish in to-day's paper, will meet the approval of every citizen of our State who NER, GARDNER, GOODLOE, PRALL, has any regard for the peace of the State, and WHITAKER. and the interest and safety of the people who are exposed to the frequent outrages adjourned until to-morrow morning at 10 perpetrated by lawless bauds of marauders. The evil which the Governor aims to suppress is a greivous one, and the severest measures are legitimate and proper.

The course which Gov. B. recommends has been adopted with great success in some parts of the country, and we have every reason to believe and hope that it will abate, in a great measure, if not entirely, these outrages

It is in the power of rebel sympathizers, as a general thing, to control these marauders, and if they neglect and refuse to use their influence, they are censurable, and should be made to suffer

We hope that Military Commandants, in every part of the State, will promptly carry out the suggestions of the proclamation. Let rigid measures be adopted. The peace of the State-the interest and eatety of every one, Union and reliel sympathizers, require prompt, vigilant, and severe treatment. Mild measures will not auswer, as the experience of the past elearly shows.

We have but one amendment to make to the proclamation, and that is, every guerrilla and marander who is caught, should be Lung upon the first tree. This class of belligerents-if they can be termed such-are sutitled to no mercy. The halter, quickly and tightly drawn, is their just reward, and, tu every instance, should be meted out to

We, as a dispeptic, have experienced considerable benefit from the use of "Bull's Cedron Bitters' as a tonic and we publish the following certificate of its properties for the benefit of others :

CINCINNATI, Dec. 5, 1863. I hereby certify that in accordance with the law regulating the sale of alcoholic liquors in the State of Ohio, I have inspected an article styled Bull's Cedron Bitters, sold by John D. EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT, FRANKFORT, KY., Jan. 4, 1864 The frequent outrages perpetrated in various parts of the State by lawless bands of marauders, can in a large degree be traced to the active aid of rebel sympathizers in our midst, or their neglect to turnish to Military Commandants the information, in their possession, which would lead to the defeat and capture of such maranders.
